C. C. ANGLIM WINS KIWANIS ORATORICAL CONTEST

FITTS GRILLS THEATER OWNER

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—UP—In two emphatic words that pierced a stilled courtroom, Alexander Pantages today denied that he attacked Eunice Pringle and pictured himself instead as one who had to protect himself against her compromising advances.

The multi-millionaire theater man, gray-haired, bronzed and veteran of the Alaskan goldfields, was an eager witness as he leaned forward on the stand and made vigorous denials.

W. I. Gilbert, sof-voiced defense attorney, led slowly up to the climactic question of the direct examination. Addressing the showman, Gilbert asked:

Attack Denied

"Did you at any time while you were in the little room make any improper advances or criminally attack Miss Pringle?"

"Absolutely not," Pantages answered, shaking his head emphatically. He contradicted the 17-year old dancer's accusation that he had seized her, placed his hand over her mouth and forced her to the floor.

"Absolutely not," was his answer again.

The jury which three weeks ago heard Miss Pringle testify that Pantages lured her to the

Bandits' Gun Only 'Relic'

MARTINEZ, Oct. 22—A machine gun found in a vacant San Jose house yesterday, which, it was believed might be linked with the train robbery at McAvoy in June, and the Rodeo bank robbery, has been found to be only a relic of the World War, it was learned at the office of sheriff R. R. Veale today.

San Jose officers informed the sheriff's office that they were thoroughly satisfied that the gun was not the one used in the holdups, and that it belonged to a San Jose man.

The gun, which was discovered when prospective tenant were taken to the home to inspect it, was linked with the holdup because the getaway car used by the bandits was purchased in San Jose.

RICHMOND MAN HAS ONE OF ORIGINAL LIGHTS BY EDISON

While Richmond is aiding the nation in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the first practical incandescent lamp made by Thomas Edison on Oct. 21, 1879 few realize that one of these first light is the property of a Richmond man.

W. J. Crangle, Richmond policeman is the proud possessor of the lamp which he has loaned to a San Francisco corporation for a large Edison display this week. Crangle found the lamp about four years ago in an old mansion on California street in San Francisco. The house was being wrecked and Crangle found the old relic on a rafter. Although several attempts have been made by Crangle and representatives of Edison and Henry Ford to trace the original owner and history of the lamp, the efforts have been without success.

Both Ford and Edison have shown a great interest in the light and a representative from the east recently called on Crangle and inspected the light.

Although the light bears some resemblance to the present electric light bulb it is a of crude design and shows the signs of the long years it has been made. The lamp still burns and throws off a light of about 15 watts although the globe is larger than the 75 watt light of modern design.

The glass bulb has a wooden base with exposed terminals. A horse hair filament which has lasted through the long years sends out the rays when the two terminals are connected to power lines.

Both Ford and Edison have shown a keen interest in the lamp as attested by letters which Crangle has received and it is possible that following the exhibition in San Francisco the lamp may be sent back to the Ford museum.

Scout Jamboree Told To Local Lions Club

The Boy Scout Jamboree and its effect upon the world peace and world brotherhood was the subject of an interesting address delivered before members of the Richmond Lions club yesterday noon at the Hotel Carquinez by Oscar Kirkham, regional Boy Scout director.

Kirkham's talk was heard by more than 100 Lions and their guests, as well as visitors from nearby cities.

Human interest stories of the great Scout meeing where 50,000 Boy Scouts from every nation on the globe gathered to celebrate the twenty-first anniversary of the birth of the Boy Scout idea, were told by Kirkham.

The speaker described some of the hardships that Scouts endured on the great trek to the jamboree. African Boy Scouts left their home and sailed in a little ship across the ocean to England, taking more than a month to do it.

Some of the Scouts in the delegation from India hiked 90 miles over the highest mountains to come to the embarkment place.

One Arab boy, hiking across the desert, was caught in a sandstorm. Sand blinded him. Yet he insisted that he must go on to the jamboree. In England a famous Scout surgeon saved the sight of one eye—refusing payment for his work.

The situation of the camp the method of conducting it, the program and other interesting points of the great meeting were told by Kirkham.

He declared that the American Boy Scouts stress out-of-doors work, especially camping more than any other Scout organization. This was shown at the jamboree by the 1400 American boys he said.

In his concluding remarks, Kirkham told how Sir Robert Paden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts, "buried the hatchet" between the Scouts of many lands, asking that peace and world brotherhood live on.

Mrs. Ross Calfee, well known Richmond soloist entertained the members with three selections which were received with great applause. She was accompanied at the piano by Denny Shaw.

The Lions club orchestra entertained with a number of selections.

Ed Hoffman, city engineer, was chairman of the day and Dr. A. B. Hinkley presided. Richmond Scout leaders and members of the Boy Scout council of Richmond, were honored guests.

LONDON GOAL OF LONE FLIER

ST JOHNS, Newfoundland, Oct. 22. UP—U. F. Diteman, cattleman from Billings, Mont., put 165 gallons of gasoline in his small Barling NB-3 monoplane today and took off from Harbor Grace at 11 a. m. EST with London as his goal.

He claimed to be descended from Sir Francis Drake, and his flight seemed sufficiently daring for any descendant of the famous English navigator.

Diteman, practically an unknown aviator, flew alone, making his preparations in secret. He headed into a light southwest breeze, under warm sunny skies. There were some low-lying clouds ahead, but the U. S. weather bureau at Washington predicted favorable weather over the north Atlantic. Southwest winds as far as Ireland, then northwest winds and showers could be expected, the bureau said.

Fast Speed

Diteman's single-motored monoplane rose without difficulty. It passed over Conception bay at an estimated 125 miles an hour speed and disappeared from sight over the Atlantic 20 minutes after the take-off. The gasoline it carried was sufficient for 25

CABINET OF BRIAND FALLS

PARIS, Oct. 22.—UP— The government of Premier Aristide Briand fell today on the reparations and Rhineland evacuation issues.

The cabinet immediately presented its resignation to President Gaston Doumergue, and the latter, after probably a week of conferences, is expected to renew the Briand leadership after offering the post of premier to Edouard Daladier, radical leader, and perhaps others.

Ways of Beating the Game

"ANNUAL income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen six, result happiness. Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds ought and six, result misery."—Mr. Micawber in "David Copperfield."

October brides and bridegrooms may be reminded of this truly immortal warning when they visit the Home-Making Centre of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs at the Grand Central Palace, and learn how to live on $50 a week. Mrs. Teresa Speed, who is there busy at the job of helping such couples to construct their home budgets, emphasizes that the one limit to what she calls "playing checkers with expenses" is that annual expenditures must never exceed the actual income.

At this point, however, growls r. and l. must be assaulting the ears of Mrs. Speed and of the other would-be-helpful clubwomen. For how are you going to spend wisely on $50 a week, if you haven't the $50 to spend? As the Nation shrewdly suggests, "there are several million wage earners in and around New York who are not so much interested in how to live on $50 a week as in how to live on what they get, which averages far below the minimum figure of the women's federation. Our manufacturing workers average about $25 a week in wages and all the best statisticians tell them that they need at least $40 to support a normal family."

THE first way, then, of beating the [illegible] game is to make a family income large enough to be spent as it should be. Here, of course, is the basic reason for the increasing number of wives with pay envelopes. The Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor has stressed repeatedly that most married women who go to work in shops and factories do so because their husbands are not making a living family wage.

Many young white-collar bridegrooms of this or any autumn are not making the $50 a week which the Federation of Women's Clubs can tell them how to spend so nicely. From $30 to $45 is the measure of their weekly pay check. Then, why criticise the business girls, whom they marry, for staying on the job and adding the contents of their pay envelopes to the family income? Better over than under $50!

AS THE old English recipe for jugged hare began, "First, catch your hare," so the plan for a weekly budget of $50 should start, "First, earn your $50—two of you, if one can't do it." But, with it in hand, the second way of beating the game is, as the Home-Making Centre explains, budgeting to fit each individual case. It seems to us plain sense for handling wisely a small income, and Mrs. Speed has some intelligent things to say about constructing the budget. For instance, in the fall and spring clothing must be bought. The money to provide apparel cannot be deducted from the current expense allotment, but must be put aside week by week. Similarly, Christmas and vacation needs must be anticipated in advance.

THERE is, it seems to us, a third absolutely essential move for all persons of moderate income who want to beat the game of hand-to-mouth living. This is the gesture of going without. We know it isn't popular, in this era of instalment buying and luxury spending. But how does anybody ever get on solid economic ground, if he (or she) has not the courage to look at a radio set, or a fur coat, or a car, and say firmly, "No, I cannot afford that, yet."

Sometimes we think we're the only person of our acquaintance not ashamed to utter this simple sentence.

We can't bear to buy things and make people wait for their money. Anyhow, as a result, we sleep nights!

THE SECOND CHANCE

My heir of life is he;
To him the thread runs
Which fate has passed through me
From sires and sons and sons.

In him, I try again;
If I can guide him well
He will escape the pen
And pit in which I fell

If I can make him wise,
If I can hold him true,
He'll capture my lost prize,
Do all I hoped to do.

TRUSTING WOMEN

The first time a certain New York girl planned to marry her young man, he explained that the marriage license clerk was ill. On the second date set, he said a New Jersey Justice of the Peace was incapacitated. The third wedding day was blighted because he told her that the plane in which they were to fly to Connecticut to be married was out of order. And the headline on the story, as recently printed, read: "Woman Suspects Jilting After 3 Marriage Postponements."

"SOME women," commented the Cynical Husband, "just can't seem to take a hint."

JOURNEY'S END

Fall day, sweet day,
Cutting a sapphire sea,
Soft clouds, blue sky,
And a smart wind running free.

Sea tang, salt spume
And a stout-ribbed, steady ship—
Dear God! The end—
A Cortlandt ferry ship!

For instance, the flank steak cooks tender and delicious under slow, moist heat in the casserole. The cost is small compared to the table satisfaction.

STUFFED FLANK STEAK (5)

Thick flank steak
Salt and pepper
Two cups breadcrumbs
One minced onion
Tablespoon minced parsley
Eighth teaspoon pepper
Half teaspoon salt
Two tablespoons drippings
Cup minced onion, green pepper and celery
Tablespoon drippings
Tablespoon flour
Two cups boiling water

Cooking time: One hour or longer in slow oven or over low flame of gas burner.

The cookery kit requires the following utensils and tools: Iron frying pan, sharp knife, cutting board, measuring cup, teaspoon, tablespoon, skewers, casserole with cover, clock.

Mince the vegetables. Lay the steak, wiped with a damp cloth, upon cutting board. Rub with mixed salt and pepper and, if you like a mysterious flavor, rub quickly with a cut garlic clove. Don't tell, though!

Melt two tablespoons drippings or butter in frying pan; cook the minced onion and parsley a moment and mix in bread crumbs; heat through; season with salt and pepper. Spread the hot stuffing over the steak and roll neatly, fastening with skewers or stout toothpicks.

Place tablespoon drippings in frying pan and soften therein the cup of minced vegetables; push aside and sear the steak roll well. Remove roll to casserole. Brown the flour in the frying pan mixture and then stir in the boiling water. When smooth, pour over steak roll. Cover and set in slow oven or over a low burner. The steak should be tender and delicious in one to one and one-half hours. Serve with baked potatoes, buttered carrots, a green salad and apple or peach betty.

The beverage is a matter of choice of course.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

By Robert Barry

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929

WASHINGTON, D. C.

We have found the man who, far from knowing that Lincoln was dead, did not even know he had been shot. Haig Patigian, the distinguished sculptor from the Pacific Coast, found him for us.

Mr. Patigian, whose artistry is encountered at every turn in California, achieved some fine things for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He has been selected by the State to do a statue of Thomas Starr King, the young Unitarian minister who went out from Boston to California in the late fifties, and through sheer eloquence and a passion for the preservation of the American Union, did more than any one else to keep California from seceding, for Statuary Hall in the Capitol—the so-called Hall of Fame.

The assignment is one of many honors which have come to this quiet-mannered, highly attractive artist of Armenian birth. He has been in Washington. His sight-seeing activities have been more comprehensive than those of a high school boy bent on writing a thesis.

Patigian's steps led him to the Lincoln Museum in the little old red brick house where Lincoln died after having been shot in Ford's Theatre just across the street. Patigian was interested in the Lincolniana there assembled, especially the etchings.

An elderly and somewhat distinguished man who looked as though he might be a Federal Judge, a Senator or a retired banker, entered with a young woman who may have been his daughter. Patigian could not avoid overhearing their conversation with the antique guard and guide.

"Where was Lincoln shot?" asked the elderly man.

"In the head," the guard replied.

"But here in this house? What was he doing here?"

"No, he was in Ford's Theatre, across the street."

"What was he doing there?"

"Attending a show."

"Who shot him?"

"An actor named Booth."

"But why did the actor want to shoot a President? Was it an accident?"

The patient guard went on to explain.

Patigian fled lest he hear more. It was too much for one born in Van, Armenia, eleven years after the death of Lincoln; one who as a boy was educated by his parents, teachers in an American mission school; one who is substantially self-educated in art; one who never knew until that day he would have some one else qualify him as a man "who knew Lincoln."

Now the friends and admirers of the sculptor are reproving him for not having been reporter enough to ascertain whether the distinguished-appearing American gentleman had been born in Washington, D. C., Boston, Mass., or Springfield, Ill.

All he can say in response is:

"What chance has my Forty-Niner in the Hall of Fame?"

Another artist of international prominence has been among us with a somewhat different sort of experience. He is Gilbert White, a recent guest at the White House. Although he has resided abroad for many years, he is not an expatriate in any sense of the word. He is a longtime friend of President Hoover.

Mr. White embarked some months ago on a cruise around the world. When he disembarked he had evolved a theory which he advances as likely to prove to be the economic salvation of the world. He is willing to give all patent, copyright and trade mark rights to the United States before permitting any other nation to have a chance at it. Mr. White says he has devised an absolute, foolproof, surefire method whereby all labor strikes may be settled and settled so they will stay settled.

Without wishing to take anything away from Commander Byrd, Mr. White believes he has done a bit of discovery worth while.

His theory is just this:

The way to break up strikes is to invite the strike leaders to take a trip around the world.

After they have lived for a month with one another on the same boat they will have ceased speaking.

By the time they get home they will be at war among themselves. Their mortal enemies will be their fellows of the walkout instead of the employers.

Then some one had to turn Mr. White's facetiousness into serious channels.

"Why doesn't Hoover get the Democratic-Progressive Republican coalition in the Senate to take a trip around the world together?" he was asked.

And that's one of the troubles about Washington. Any time a man offers some economic theory, some one has to drag in politics.

So long as this seems to be artists' day in the column, it may not be amiss to report that the British delegation to the sessions of President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald in Washington have not been unproductive in that field.

It was but natural that people should say that Ambassador Charles G. Dawes soothed the British into acceptance of naval parity through playing for them his "Melody in A" on his Stradivarius.

Sir Robert Vonsittart, permanent secretary to the Prime Minister of Great Britain, is supposed to be one of those ogres of the British Foreign Office who are so steeped in intrigue they think of nothing else.

Sir Robert was chief of the American Intelligence Section of the British Foreign Office prior to promotion to his present position. He is quite keen in the head, very personable and thoroughly well informed.

But we learn that instead of having intrigue as a hobby he writes love lyrics and they are good enough for several volumes of them to have been published and commended.

Byron sitting at Machiavelli's desk.

Sir Robert's accomplishments in the field of verse have served to emphasize anew the delightful social accomplishments of most of the young career men in King George's diplomatic service.

While the President and the Prime Minister were in seclusion at the Rapidan River fishing camp, the younger attaches of the British Embassy and the Canadian and Irish Legations did the best they could to arrange informal entertainment for the members of Mr. MacDonald's party left in Washington.

Several dinner parties resulted and one evening several of them happened to merge at the Canadian Legation on invitation of Vincent Massey, the Minister of the Dominion.

One after another those young British diplomats would play a piano or sing. They were airs which revealed the diversity of their talents. British, French, German war songs from Crimea through the Marne, and sung in the original language. When songs were lacking, the young career men who already have seen service in many parts of the world would give imitations of a British Consul in the Orient, a British Army Colonel in India, or a couple of cockney performers in a London music hall.

Mussolini's Victory

A quarter million Italians are now on the land in Tripoli. This is a remarkable fact, considering that the country was just a huge desert a few years ago. Nevertheless, the rich black soil beneath the sand was there all the time. This same soil once made the country the granary of the empire-republic of Carthage and partly the granary of Rome. With the disintegration of the empire, Rome abandoned North Africa, recalling her garrisons, which resulted in the settlers soon following suit. Saracens overran the Near East, the Turk appeared. The desert crept slowly forward like a wasting disease upon the land. Then Mussolini, in his search for wheat-producing soil to feed the growing Italian nation, bethought himself of Tripoli. Inquiries were instituted by agricultural experts and it was discovered that about a foot of sand on the average covered the earth. Then the Italians went to work and to-day they have succeeded in checking the desert. Windbreaks thousands of miles in length had to be built. Certain kinds of grass were planted to hold the sand in place. Advice was obtained from experts all over the world. Of course the battle is not won. And here and there men have even been defeated. But the balance is in favor of the immigrants. Fruit is being raised. Wheat is under cultivation and experimentation. Great things are expected from the future. For in principle Tripoli is a success.

At Suez

The tremendous size and far-flung interests of the British Empire are most forcibly brought home to the man who will brave the terrible shafts of the Sun God for a day or so at Suez to watch what is passing through the canal. Not only does he see there the palatial steamers of the P. and O. on their way to and from India, but when it is pointed out to him that twice or three times a week certain "de luxe" steamers carry 650 first class passengers from Kenya and Tanganyka to London, it becomes clear that a new dominion must be in the making there, in the very heart of the dark continent. It is, perhaps, no longer correct to speak of Africa in terms which imply a mysterious unexplored jungle, when railways are running in every direction and almost every square mile of land is explored. Of course there are still vast territories uninhabited and uncultivated, but the white man is pushing in from all sides. And in Africa the white man generally means the Englishman, except in the Sahara region, where the French have established an ever-widening sphere of interests and where Marshal Lyautey has been the builder of the modern empire of Morocco. Egypt is prosperous. South Africa certainly is forging ahead. The idea of a Cape to Cairo railway is being advanced again. Also a railway along the West Coast with a tunnel from the African coast to Gibraltar. Gibraltar may be of little value in modern warfare and Suez in no immediate danger as long as the fleet lies within a few days, steaming distance, but, seeing the amount of British East Africa and East India traffic in the Mediterranean, it is easy to see that Palestine as a basis for defense of the canal is a weighty imperial necessity.

"Viniana"

A Mr. C. W. Berry has written a delightful book on wines under the title "Viniana." It is doubtful if the work has any value to a people who are not even permitted to indulge in a glass of beer, yet, on the other hand, Americans do travel abroad, and there, instead of indiscriminate guzzling, which is quite pardonable in view of the famished condition they are in, they should take cognizance of some such book like "Viniana." You need not know a chablis from a sauterne to like the book. It takes the form of a symposium—the claret dinner, the Burgundy dinner and the champagne dinner. At each dinner the host, who is a peer among connoisseurs, has carefully selected the successive dishes to suit the successive wines, and the successive wines to suit the successive dishes. As each dish is approached with all the appropriate ritual that it really requires, hosts and guests engage in the most pleasant dialogue upon wine in general and wines in particular. There is many an apt "gustation," dug up from some forgotten age when the juice of the vine was still in universal honor. Many readers of this book, who have never sampled any of the illustrious vintages mentioned, will simply fall in love with their resonant and glorious names and the things the author says about their excellence. One of the quotations mentioned is a translation from a versicle found above the door of an old tavern near Lyon in France. It says: "Better to drink and then feel bad, than not to drink and wish you had."

A Plantation Party

A PLANTATION party would make a pleasurable October gathering. The lawn is a good place to stage it and there should be a big moon. The October full moon seems the largest one of the year.

Of course you will need lanterns, too. You can make these of pickaninny fans and big sunflowers, using crepe paper. For the pickaninny you just cut out big round holes and paste black and white crepe paper in the opening for eyes, and the mouth opening is likewise lined with red and white paper to represent lips and teeth.

There should be two or more banjo players strumming Southern melodies on the veranda where the guests are received by the host and hostess.

It would be a pretty lawn scene if the guests were attired in Colonial costumes as, of course, the host and hostess should be.

A couple of the guests might be induced to black up and do some Negro dancing on the porch or lawn.

Community singing would be a pleasing program. Have a black-faced singer in suitable costume sing "Old Folks at Home," and ask all to join in the chorus. Follow this with two colored mammies singing a crooning bedtime song, then have another black-faced singer render "Old Black Joe." The quartet should act as leaders and begin with the familiar "My Old Kentucky Home," in which all guests should join. "Dixie" and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," may follow, and request the guests to suggest songs.

Of course there should be a Negro cakewalk and several couples might compete to make this entertaining. Let them do this to some lively tune, such as "Turkey in the Straw."

After the games and, perhaps, some dancing, the guests will be ready to enjoy the ice-cold watermelon that constitutes the refreshments.

Shaping Spindle Legs

WHEN one is very, very young, there is something rather charming about having a bony neck and spindle legs. But when the figure begins to fill out and the legs stay spindle, that becomes a beauty problem, and a problem which frequently requires a variety of corrective treatments.

FRANCES OLIVIER

It is not fat so much as muscle, that stalky legs require. Obviously then, the first step toward shaping a thin and shapeless leg is to give it lots of exercise. Have you ever observed how few dancers there are with thin pipe-stem limbs? On the contrary, dancing develops the calves and so gives symmetry to the legs.

Ballroom dancing is not precisely what we have in mind, however. It helps, to be sure, being much better for the legs than idleness. But the spindle-legged, if they would make a thorough job of supplying their lack, will go in seriously for some good, strenuous folk dancing or ballet work.

There are special exercises too, of course, for developing the legs. Vigorous skipping, for example, leaping and running. Nor need one have to hire a hall or an instructor in order to practise these latter exercises. There is such a thing as running in one spot, and skipping in one spot, both of which can be practised conveniently and comfortably in the privacy of one's own room. By way of added help, and in the interest of speeding up the desired results, hill climbing is excellent and so also is stair climbing, when done on the balls of the feet. Who said that subway and elevated staircases and apartment houses minus elevators were so bad? Even the dull daily routine of housework can be a means to beauty culture, but that's another article.

Now none of these things that we have told you is in the nature of a miracle. Sculpturing straight-up legs into things of beauty is a job, and a job requiring both patience and perseverance. Lest "the patient" suffer discouragement, there are several things she can do in the meanwhile to change the apparent delineation of her legs.

For one thing, she can taboo chiffon hose and wear instead service-weight silk and silk-and-wool mixtures. Then, too, she can alter her skirt lengths so that they flatter her legs as much as possible.

A skirt too short serves to make thin legs and shapeless legs look even thinner and more shapeless. A skirt that is too long tends to produce the same effect, as well as lending a certain grotesqueness to the entire appearance, the present mode being what it is.

Let the hem end at the point where the calf of the leg bulges fullest and the final effect will be quite becoming.

Helping the School Child

By Emilie Hoffman

MARION has not been doing good work in school this term. Her frequent complaints of headache, &c., have given her many a holiday so far. Last year the last few sessions and these absences were always under strong protest. In June she was promoted as an honor pupil.

The observing mother recalled that Marion adored her last year's teacher and she decided that here was the explanation for the child's indifferent attitude toward school at present and her complete lack of effort.

Being a wise mother she did not discuss the teacher with her daughter because she had not become acquainted with the lady, but once reasonably sure she had discovered the cause of her child's apathy, she called upon the teacher.

That evening at the dinner table she spoke glowingly of the teacher. There was no responsive echo from Marion, but the mother noticed the girl's look of surprise and she was pleased to see her manifest a growing interest.

A couple of days later the mother asked Marion whether she would like to go on a visit with her and Marion quickly asked: "But how about school?" "Couldn't you cut school for to-day?" asked the wily mother and she was satisfied when the girl replied: "I don't think I'd better. It will lower my marks."

Marion's strong admiration for her former teacher naturally set a high standard in her mind for the successor. This year's instructor is a newcomer in the school, so every pupil was a stranger to her, and Marion, in her disappointment, made no special efforts in any way, so she did not become an outstanding pupil and she was just one of the many in the class. This was very different from her attitude in the other grade where the teacher knew her personally and was familiar with her good school record. Being an intelligent and interesting pupil this teacher, naturally, became interested in her and under these circumstances school was a pleasure to the child.

The day after the mother's visit the new teacher began to show an interest in Marion and this young lady, quick to notice the attention, changed her manner at once. She soon discovered many good qualities in her teacher and now there are no rifts in Marion's school life and her marks promise to speedily reach the high mark of last year.

All because a wise mother understood her child and realized that in a friendly get-acquainted talk with the teacher she could tactfully interest the teacher sufficiently to secure for her child the personal attention, be it ever so small, that means so much in the school attitude of the child.

With such a mother a child's school life will be a pleasure and class progress will be assured.

MUSICAL SHOW DELIGHTS AT CALIFORNIA

You'll gasp with amazement when you see what Paramount has brought you in "The Cocoanuts," the Marx Brothers famous Broadway musical comedy hit now on the screen at the Fox-California theater. It's something new, something marvelously entertaining; something that is different from any moving picture you have ever seen, talking or silent.

"The Cocoanuts" is truly the first screen musical comedy. For the first time, the mirth of musical comedy is brought to the screen to provide a delightful entertainment which you will laugh and sing and talk about for weeks. If the lovers have a song in mind when they are in conversation, they sing. If the chorus feel like interrupting with one of their dance numbers they step right out. And through it all those inimitable fooler, the famous Marx Brothers, keep banging away with their inane ridiculous lunatic jesting.

Groucho, Harpo, Chico and Zeppo! Who, who has ever seen or heard of them, would ever miss an opportunity to laugh with them again? They are superb and they register just as perfectly on camera and microphone as they ever did on the stage. Those who see "The Cocoanuts" at the Fox-California theater will see the same show as those who saw "The Cocoanuts" during its year run at $6.60 top, on the Broadway stage.

And they'll see and hear more. Irving Berlin, who wrote the original music and lyrics for "The Cocoanuts" contributed the catchy new theme song "When My Dreams Come True," to the screen presentation. And Mary Eaton Ziegfeld's scintillating star and Oscar Shaw. Broadways favorite leading man have the romantic leads. And choruses of unsurpassed beauty and settings of lavish gorgeousness, beautifully photographed, entertain.

Every item in the production has been provided with generosity and the result is entertainment, delightful entertainment that sweeps you away in a fairy land of laughter and music and romance. Whatever you do, or dont do this week don't miss "The Cocoanuts."

Also on this bill is a talking comedy "Friendship" and a Fox News.

Colusa Avenue Paving Ordered

MARTINEZ, Oct. 22.—The Board of Supervisors meeting yesterday overruled protests and ordered the paving of Colusa avenue, near Sunset View cemetery, extending from Fairmont avenue.

Two Play Same Role In Film 'Hole In Wall'

Two actresses play the same role and wear identical costumes in the Paramount all-talking "The Hole in the Wall," a spiritualistic mystery play which will be heard at the Fox-California theater tomorrow only.

They are Claudette Colbert, stage star and leading woman, and Nelly Savage, well known dancer and player in half a dozen pictures. The role is that of Madame Mystera, the spiritualist medium. Miss Savage starts out as the real Madame Mystera and is killed in an accident. Then Miss Colbert appears in the plot, masquerading as the late medium.

Miss Colbert is brune, and of medium height and Miss Savage is blond and tall, yet when veiled and seated behind the mysterious crystal sphere, there is apparent a similarity in the outline of their features which shows why they were picked to play together.

They are also alike in being of foreign birth. Miss Colbert was born in Paris and Miss Savage was born in Teheran, Persia, where her father, an Englishman was manager of the Imperial bank. Miss Savage was with the Ziegfeld Follies for 60 weeks and she entered the pictures in "Enemies of Women."

Also on this program is a talking comedy "Haunted."

ORDINANCE NO. 651

PROVIDING FOR LICENSING AND BONDING OF BUILDING CONTRACTORS.

The Council of the City of Richmond do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. Except as herein otherwise provided it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to construct, alter, repair or add to any building or structure within the City of Richmond without first filing the bond herein required and obtaining a building contractor's license from the Tax Collector. The license tax for said building contractor's license shall be fifty dollars ($50) per annum, payable annually in advance. Before a building contractor's license may be issued by the Tax Collector the applicant therefor shall have filed with the City Clerk a bond approved by the City Manager and City Attorney in favor of the City of Richmond in the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000) executed by a responsible surety company, conditioned for the faithful performance of all work done by the principal in the City of Richmond in full compliance with the building laws of the City of Richmond.

SECTION 2. The Building Inspector shall have power to suspend any license issued under this ordinance and shall stop all work and refuse further permit thereunder, on account of gross incompetence of the building contractor or on account of the building contractor's wilful violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance, the building laws of the City of Richmond, the state housing law or the state contractor's license law. When suspending any license the Building Inspector shall notify the building contractor in writing and report his action to the Council for consideration. Upon satisfactory evidence of the sufficiency of the cause for such suspension the Council shall revoke said license, any permit issued thereunder shall be forfeited, and no license shall thereafter be issued to said building contractor unless approved by the Council.

SECTION 3. The provisions hereof as to bond and license shall not apply to any person performing minor construction or repairing work when the total cost or value of the labor and material for such work does not exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000), nor to the work of sub-contracting under a licensed building contractor, nor to any workman when working upon a building supervised by a licensed building contractor or supervised by an owner as herein defined, nor shall they apply to the doing of work by an owner as herein defined upon a single family or duplex dwelling for his own occupancy in whole or part, or upon outbuildings adjacent and accessory thereto. An owner is defined as any person constructing, altering, repairing or adding to a single family or duplex dwelling for his own occupancy in whole or part, but shall not be deemed to mean a person constructing, altering, repairing or adding to buildings for sale or investment. SECTION 7. No provision of this ordinance shall apply to any plant, factory or other structure erected or to be erected for industrial purposes upon lands not subdivided into city blocks or lots.

SECTION 8. This ordinance shall not be construed to relieve any person owning or controlling any building or structure erected or to be erected, altered, repaired or added to in the City of Richmond from liability for damage to any person injured by any defect therein, or to lessen such liability, nor shall the City of Richmond or any employee thereof be held as assuming any such liability by reason of the making of any inspection, the issuance of any permit or license, or the performane of any other act in the enforcement of this ordinance or the building laws of the City of Richmond.

SECTION 9. Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be deemed guilty of a separate offense for each and every day or portion thereof during which any such violation is committed, continued or permitted, and upon conviction thereof shall be punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500) or by imprisonment in the city jail of the City of Richmond or the county jail of the County of Contra Costa for not more than six (6) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

NEW PONTOONS FOR SALVAGE INVENTED

STOCKHOLM—An entirely new kind of pontoon, said to be of great importance for a marine salvage work and far easier to handle than the old type which is bulky and unwieldy, has just been invented by a Swedish engineer, Ragnar Blomquist. When submerged, it opens into its natural size and is filled with air through a hose leading from the compressor of the salvage ship. The new invention, which has been patented in all seafaring countries, has aroused great interest among shipping experts in Sweden and abroad.

Soviet Plans Children Home On Old Ship

MOSCOW, — A number of "floating homes" for the homeless children are being planned as part of the effort to turn these vagrants into useful citizens.

It is proposed to use old ships on the Black and Caspian Seas and on the Russian river highways for this purpose.

One of the chief problems in dealing with the homeless youngsters has been that many of them run away from schools and colonies where they are placed. The ships, it is arguer, will satisfy the roving disposition of the children. At the same time they can be brought up as expert sailors for the great mercantile fleet which Soviet Russia hopes to possess by the time they grow up.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—(U.P.)—What's that odor of arnica? Who spilled the collodion?

It's only the hockey players, the really rough, tough guys of professional sport, getting ready for another season of mayhem on the ice.

While football coaches are moaning because halfback Higgins has a sprained ankle and left end Limpus a lame back, the pro hockey stars are starting for training camp to prepare for a sport in which each team travels with internes in lieu of substitutes.

Thrilling Sport

"Sew him up and throw him back on the ice," is the motto of the medico as some hard boiled right wing comes in minus an ear or two. Fastest and occasionally the most thrilling of sports, ice hockey cetrainly takes the palm as the roughest. They have to be tough to play ice hockey and they are.

The New York Rangers, who, of course, are Canadians from St. John's to Vancouver, are assembling at Springfield, Mass., on Friday. There they will find their little brothers, the Springfield Indians, a sort of prep school of hockey, also owned by Madison Square Garden.

Probably there will be no ice, so the assembled squads will practice banging their heads against iron posts and breaking hockey sticks over one another's shins until the weather turns seasonable. Chipping nicks in each other's skulls with skate runners will vary the workouts, and Lester Patrick, the Rangers' manager, also will take his little innocents shopping for spare teeth.

Teams Report

The New York Americans, who will be directed by Lionel Conacher, one of the few playing managers in hockey, will report at their New Haven camp next Monday. Like the Rangers, the Americans are really Canadians from Toronto to Baffin Bay, and very, very rough babies to boot.

The Montreal Maroons, who are to be coached by Jerry LaFlamme, former referee, already are at work getting ready for the season, although they haven't any ice.

There has been an important change in the playing rules permitting forward passing from any zone, but they still need ice to play the game.

Season Opens

As a nucleus for a team, the New York Rangers will have Frank Boucher, Bun and Bill Cook, Ching Johnson, Sparky Vail, Leo Bourgeault, Murry Murdock, and John Ross Roach. Taffy Abel, the plump defense man, has gone to the Chicago Black Hawks, but Patrick has a number of likely looking Indians to choose from.

The Americans do not anticipate any sweeping shifts, although the star-spangled troopers were not world beaters as they lined up during the 1928-29 season.

The regular playing season opens Nov. 14, with the Rangers at Montreal, the Canadians at Ottawa, and Boston at Detroit.

Gus Sonnenberg, Turk Wrestler Mix On Street

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—UP—Bystanders opined that it probably was a publicity stunt anyhow, but they admitted it was worth while stopping to see Gus Sonnenberg, the world's champion heavyweight wrestler, on his back.

It all happened on the corner of Seventh and Broadway, which is Los Angeles busy intersection. Pete Ladjone, a Turkish wrestler, put Sonnenberg down on the sidewalk and Sonnenberg had Ladjone arrested. Ladjone pleaded not guilty and jury trial was set for Nov. 12. He was released on $100 bond. Sonnenberg will wrestle "Strangler" Lewis Wednesday night; bystanders were suspicious.

Sonnenberg said he had promised to help Ladjone get a match and had turned away to walk down the street when "Ladjone socked me in the mouth with his fist." Sonnenberg said he offered to meet Ladjone anytime Ladjone declared Sonnenberg had said something no Turkish gentleman could allow.

Hi-Y Cagers Will Enter City Loop

The Boys' Hi-Y is practicing strenously for its entrance into the Richmond city league and the Eastbay loop. Jack Stoddard, athletic manager of the club, is captaining the squad.

The constitution of the Hi-Y was read to the club by Jack Carr at a meeting held last night in the Y. M. C. A. building. A co-ed theater party was planned for the near future. The date for the affair has not been definitely set. Jack McLean has charge of the arrangements.

DOVE HUNTERS PAY $900 FINE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. —Southern California claims another record and as a result dove hunters from various cities in this section have found that the fish and game laws have teeth. This all came about when Deputy Bob Little of the division of Fish and Game hung up what the southern patrol district claims as a new record when he arrested thirty-three violators for having over the limit on Sept. 1 and 2, confiscated over 13,00 birds and secured fines totaling almost $900.00.

The dove hunters flock to Imperial Valley on opening day. It is excellent dove country and this year it seemed to be better than ever. Apparently the birds were so easy to get that few thought about daily limits of fifteen which is plainly prescribed by law.

Anticipating that many would yield to temptation, Deputy Little, who makes his headquarters at Banning, recruited a posse of volunteer deputies, T. G. Elliot, I. O. Burton and J. R. Gray of Redlands and proceeded to halt every automobile that appeared to be occupied by dove shooters as the motoring nimrods came through Cabazon, a sort of port of entry from the Imperial Valley

$65 Fine

Little's plans worked out perfectly. Many protested that due to the fact they had two days they had figured they were entitled to two days' limits, ignoring the provision in the law which makes it unlawful to have more than fifteen birds in one's possession.

There was much protesting but when taken in court thirty-three entered pleas of guilty and Judge Lee Childers of Banning accessed fines running from $25.00 to $65.00 and in one instance one enthusiastic hunter started serving thirty days in the Riverside County Jail in lieu of the fine.

Despite the protests, it was found that many of the hunters had not only the thirty which made up a two days shoot but had as many as sixty six birds. Those with more than thirty were assessed in a heavier amount than the hunters having thirty or less.

Eighteen hunters arrested had more than thirty birds, while fifteen had thirty birds or less, but all had well in excess of the daily bag limit.

Hunter Fined

W. E. Muir of Los Angeles who in addition to thirty-two doves, two more than the weekly limit and seventeen more than he could legally possess, had seen fit to kill five valley quail, the season upon which does not open until December 1st. For his over limit of doves Muir paid a fine of $35.00 and on the charge of possession of quail in closed season was assessed a fine of $50.00, both of which he paid.

Four Los Angeles men who had sixty-six doves each were fined $65.00 each, one taking the thirty day sentence instead of paying.

The judge in most cases gave the defendant back a legal limit of birds and sent the balance to the Riverside County hospital for the benefit of the patients there.

Six Arrested

The hunters were from Long Beach, Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Hollywood and Glendale.

Just to add a little to his laurels Little nailed six more on September 8th.

"Getting over limits of birds is mighty poor conservation and Deputy Little's vigilance and this great record of arrests should put at least a damper on this practice Charles S. Bauder, Assistant Chief of Patrol in charge of the Southern District remarked after scanning the reports of the cases made by the Banning Deputy.

Junior High Girls Plan 'Play Day'

More than 200 girls of Roosevelt and Longfellow junior high schools will take part in a play day to be held Oct. 29 at Nicholl park.

The competition will include baseball and kickball. Miss Ingeborg Adams, director of athletics at Roosevelt and Miss Marie Loveridge of Longfellow will supervise the activities.

This play day has been planned on the recommendation of the women's national athletic organization, that play days, rather than inter school competition be held. The national organization believes that the keen competition caused by inter-school contests is undesirable and tends to undermine the health of the girls. Though there is still an atmosphere of competition in the play day activities, the fierce competition of inter-school struggles is partially eliminated by the new method.

CARD GRIDDERS HOLD SECRET PRACTICE

PALO ALTO, Oct. 22—(U.P.)—Persons interested in finding out what the Stanford Cardinals were doing to prepae for the important contest with University of Southern California next Saturday found the task as difficult as learning the deliberations of a court jury today.

The only persons in the Coliseum enclosure when they went through their paces were coaches, doctors, and the players themselves. Never before have Stanford coaches been so painstaking in making practices secret except before the "big game" with University of California.

The action was necessary, however. The outcome of the game on Saturday may determine the mythical national championship.

Trainers of the team said tonight that barring mishaps in the next few days every star of the squad would be able to play.

U. S. Tourists Deplete Supply Manx Cats

LONDON.—The residents of the Isle of Man, spot of land in the Irish sea, are disturbed over the diminishing number of its Manx cats and are thinking of restricting the purchases of visitors.

American tourists, say the natives, are the heaviest purchasers of the fluffy wolly creatures and the prices they are willing to pay makes even the most ardent cat protectionist waver.

BRONCO BACKS LAUDED BY SCRIBE

UNIVERSITY OF SANTA CLARA, Oct. 23—"Mettler and Machado are as good as any two backs on the coast"—so says Bert Dunne the former publicity man for Knute Rockne, during the campaign of the Four Horsemen.

So far this season, these two men, have been outstanding in every game the Broncos have played, and have caused considerable notice of the way they handle themselves, offensively and defensively.

Mettler, considered a real triple threat man, runs, kicks, and passes in such consistent and spectacular manner, that will bring him potential all-coast honors.

Swinging hips, tricky and fast feet, and wonderful open field running brings us in contact with Santa Clara's diminutive but most colorful half, "Chris" Machado, who has been startling the fans and working in perfect unison with Mettler.

The Mettler to Machado pass is now being recognized as one that can be considered dangerous in any competition, in so much as it is a consistent gainer and often means a touchdown if a prospective broken field is in sight for Machado.

Such men as Mettler and Machado are an asset to the Bronco's well developing machine, and with the aid of "Al" Terremere, the ploughing fullback, and "Herb" Haakinson, the heady and clever quarter back, they must be watched at all times.

Dreams Of Death, Killed Same Day

BUFFALO.—Mrs. Estelle Schoocover, 50, told her husband at the breakfast table that a dream she had during the night was a premonition that disaster would overtake one of them before 24 hours had passed.

Arriving home after work, Schooever failed to find his wife. Deciding to go to a corner store he walked past a group of persons standing over a prostrate body lying on the trolley tracks.

It proved to be that of his wife. She had been killed by a traction car.

CAGE PRACTICE STARTS AT HIGH

Basketball practice started yesterday at Richmond Union high school under the coaching of Ivan W. Hill, head athletic coach, and Phillip Hempler, his assistant. More than sixty boys turned out, and plenty of fine material is available this season.

A strong varsity outfit is assured, for many veterans will be in the fray this year, including Russel Lane, Doyle Taylor, Elden Hall, Art Neckle, and Joe Viano.

A group of former B team men are also expected to add strength to the Varsity. Among these former lightweights are Don Randall, Lester Myers, Bruno Roveda, Edward Regalia, Paul Maloney, Carl Drexel, George Degnan, Bezo Marcus, Jack Stoddard and Hugo Boschetti.

The C team is composed of a group of fast skillful players, who are only excluded from B squad because of their lighter weight

The varsity met last night with Doyle Taylor, who is manager of the varsity squad. L. Marcus had charge of the B team and Joe Viano directed the practice of the C team.

The first game of the season will be played against Crockett high school, Nov. 15. The gymnasium where the game will be played has not yet been definitely selected.

Limas To Fight On Chicago Card

Tiger Limas, a pugilist who used to see action in the El Cerrito ring, has been signed up for a bout on the Dempsey card to be staged at the Chicago Coliseum in December. Formerly known as Frankie Limas among the El Cerrito fans, he has attained considerable success in the boxing world.

One more feather was added to his cap when he knocked out Jack Venerable Friday in San Francisco. The "kayo" was Limas' 14th straight knockout. Limas has a fierce punch, and is endowed with a fast pair of legs, all of which assets make him a formidable opponent.

He is leaving Sunday for the Chicago bout, accompanied by his manager, C. B. "Doc" Kidson. He will fight a main event and two semi-final bouts in Phoenix before the big Chicago bout.

FREAK FOOTBALL PLAYS — — — By Will B. Johnstone

Add this one to the famous football stories of all time.

It happened at Georgetown when the great Jim Thorpe was pulling the "here-he-goes, there he-comes" stuff on the gridiron as Carlisle's super-back.

The principals in the tragedy and comedy—it was a little of both, were Charley Bergin, end for Georgetown and Quarterback Costello of the same team.

The scene of the combat was Georgetown's hilltop stadium, some distance out of Washington.

Thorpe had been particularly destructive in bursting through the Georgetown line for long gains, and touchdowns were coming in quick order for the Indians. Georgetown was by no means a weak team, but it had no more of a chance of stopping Thorpe than a scoreboard has of getting in out of the cold.

Thorpe came out of the pack in one of his wild charges and spilled Bergin, who had attempted to down him. The big Redskin broke into a clear field with only Costello, the safety man between him and the goal posts.

It was too much for Bergin. Cupping his hands, he let out a roar that could be heard in the stands:

"Open the gates, Crossy he's going through to Washington!"

SAY IT WITH SONGS

BY ARLINE de HAAS

Copyright, 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone picture starring Al Jolson; Darryl Francis Zanuck and Harvey Gates, Scenarists.

Joe Lane, vaudeville and star singer of CJSA Radio Station, quarrels with Arthur Phillips, his manager, because of Phillips' attentions to his wife, Katherine. Joe hits his manager, who, in falling, strikes his head and dies. Joe serves a year in prison for manslaughter. Unwilling to disgrace Katherine and her son, Little Pal, Joe leaves his wife to seek a divorce by accusing her of intimacy with Dr. Merrill, the physician for whom she works as a nurse. Immediately upon his release Joe goes to see his boy in school. When he learns Little Pal follows his father and is run over. The school notifies Katherine that the boy is missing.

"The McKinley School for Boys? ...Yes, Miss Montgomery... What? ...No... No, I haven't seen him! What's happened? Has anything happened to Junior?"

Her voice was frantic. She could scarcely understand what the Head Mistress was saying. She only knew that she was repeating words. Slowly Katherine put the receiver back on the hook and stood there, caring about her little apartment, her head whirling. Junior was lost. They couldn't find him. Quickly he picked up the receiver and called a number. She waited as the only his rival could save his child buzzing sounded in her ears, telling her that the other 'phone was ringing.

"Hello?" At last the answer came. It was Johnson, Dr. Merrill's butler. She recognized his voice. "Johnson?" Katherine began quickly. "Is Dr. Merrill dressed? ...He isn't? ...I'm terribly sorry, Johnson, but this is Mrs. Lane calling and I've got to see Dr. Merrill right away ...Yes! Will you please ask him if he can come right over? Yes, Johnson. That's all. Good bye."

Once more Katherine put the receiver back on the hook and then sank into a chair, trying to think. Junior was missing and Joe had been to see him yesterday. That thought kept recurring in her mind. Could it be possible that Joe had taken the child? Would he do such a thing? He had just got out of prison, she knew that. She had kept track of the days.

But Joe wouldn't do anything like that. He was thoughtless, but he wouldn't deliberately cause her anxiety. On the other hand, Katherine suddenly thought, Joe might have wanted to worry her. He seemed to have changed so in that prison. The way he had talked to her that last time she had seen him—told her he never wanted to lay eyes on her again and she could get a divorce; insinuated that she was in love with Robert Merrill.

If Joe had taken the child, she kept on repeating to herself, she'd have to get him back. Junior was her baby, too—just as much as he was Joe's. She opened a wardrobe and took out a freshly starched uniform and began putting it on, more from force of habit than anything else. As she turned to go into the living room the doorbell rang. She flew to press the button that unlocked the downstair's door. A tramp of feet coming up the stairs and then Dr. Merrill appeared.

"What's happened, Katherine?" he demanded anxiously as the girl led the way to the apartment.

"It's about Junior." Katherine closed the door and stood in the center of the room, clasping and unclasping her hands nervously. "He's lost — disappeared—Oh, I don't know what's happened! The school telephoned me just now. We've got to do something, quick!"

"We'll do something right away," Dr. Merrill consoled. "Only tell me a little more so I know how to go about the matter. The school telephoned you that Junior is missing. When did they find that out?"

"This morning, they said," Katherine began. "They really missed him last night, but the woman in charge of his dormitory thought that he was with his father. You see, they knew that Joe had been there yesterday—"

"Oh!" Dr. Merrill suddenly straightened up and his eyes narrowed. "So Joe had something to do with this? When did he see the child, did they say?"

"Yes, he came to see Junior yesterday, Miss Montgomery told me," Katherine repeated wearily. "Joe spent the afternoon with him. Miss Hinman had told her that Junior was with his father. That seems to be the reason why they didn't look for him."

"Now perhaps you're all excited over nothing," Dr. Merrill soothed. But he, too, had his own ideas as to what had happened to the child and felt that Joe was at the bottom of the affair. "Perhaps Junior's quite safe with his father. However, that doesn't alter things. We must find out for certain. We'll call the police and tell them to round up Joe Lane."

"The police! Oh, but they might arrest Joe for kidnapping Junior! They—they'd send him back to prison for that, wouldn't they?" Katherine demanded.

"Well, if Joe's done this he deserves to have something like that done to him!" Dr. Merrill's scowl was ominous.

"No — no!" Katherine gasped. "It's put a new face on the situation.

"But, Katherine," Dr. Merrill persisted. "You can't go on like this. We'll have to find out something. You mustn't cry. That's not going to do a bit of good. What we want to do is to take some action quickly." He raised Katherine to her feet and put his arm tenderly about her. "If you don't want anything to happen to Joe I'll see that it doesn't, I promise you."

"I—I only want to find Junior," Katherine sobbed.

"All right," Dr. Merrill took out his pocket handkerchief and wiped the girl's eyes. "Now be the very efficient person that you are and get ready to meet me at the hospital at 10 o'clock. I've got an important operation and I'll need you. Meantime, I'll start to look for the boy."

With a final handclasp Dr. Merrill was gone. As he made his way to the street and his car he was thinking how he might set in motion the proper authorities. Joe undoubtedly had the child, he told himself. He'd have to get the police to find Joe, and once the song plugger was found he could square things so that there would be no prison term.

As Dr. Merrill stopped his motor in front of his office he was still debating as to the best way to handle the situation. He glanced at his watch. It wasn't 9 o'clock yet. He'd have to get right to work. Patients would be coming in soon, and then he'd told Katherine he'd be at the hospital by 10. He had no operation scheduled for that hour, but he had thought it best to keep the girl's mind away from the child as much as possible and work usually proved a sedative.

Within the large, luxuriously furnished waiting room a nurse was adjusting her cap before a long mirror preparatory for the day's routine.

"Oh, good morning, Dr. Merrill." She turned to greet the physician as he opened the door. "You're early."

"Good morning, Miss Locke." The doctor answered the greeting with an air of abstraction. "I don't want to see anyone a moment before 9 o'clock." He hurried into his own office, hung his hat on a rack and sat down before the telephone.

Twice he lifted the receiver and twice he put it back again without calling a number. He must get the matter into the hands of the police at once, he realized that. But in the event that they found the child with Joe it would look bad for the ex-convict.

He couldn't see his waiting room from where he sat, and consequently he didn't see the shabby man in the cheap serge suit who entered bearing a child in his arms.

"Did you wish to see Dr. Merrill?" the girl asked.

"Yes, ma'm, I did." Joe, his eyes bloodshot from lack of sleep and tears, leaned anxiously over the desk.

"Have you an appointment?" Miss Locke questioned crisply.

"No." Joe shook his head. "But Dr. Merrill 'll see me all right, I know. It's about my boy." He held out the little form in his arms. "You just tell Mr. Merrill that Joe Lane is here." He watched, waiting to see what impression his name made on the girl.

But the nurse merely nodded and rose from her chair and stood looking at the child. The name of Joe Lane evidently meant nothing to her. She certainly never connected the man and the boy with the Miss Weldon who assisted Dr. Merrill in his operations. For Katherine, on the advice of Dr. Merrill, had resumed her own name when she returned to nursing, and professionally she was Miss Weldon.

Richmond Man Denies Charge Of Desertion

Charged with deserting his wife and two children 30 years ago, Peter Kelleghan, 225 Clarence street, yesterday pleaded not guilty before Police Judge Joseph M. Golden in San Francisco.

The charges were preferred by Mrs. Mary Antella Callaghan, of San Francisco, who claims that Kelleghan and she were married after a whirlwind courtship in 1898.

Kelleghan, who was arrested Monday, denied marrying the woman, and declared that he had never seen her before.

He further stated that he had been married for 21 years, has a wife and four children, and has presided in Richmond for many years.

Mrs. Callaghan in taking the stand yesterday told of her marriage in Los Banos on Oct. 19, 1898; the subsequent alleged desertion, and the final culmination of a 30 year search for the man, whom she identifies as Peter Kelleghan of Richmond.

She declared that her son, Frederick, had traced first one Callaghan and then another, the search finally culminating with the discovery of the local man. Mrs. Callaghan agreed with her son that he was the man, and swore out the warrant, charging abandonment.

The case was continued for a week to enable Mrs. Callaghan to search marriage license records at Sacramento and to find a Mrs. Edith Patton, who according to Mrs. Callaghan witnessed the wedding.

DARING FLIER ON OCEAN FLIGHT

hours at a cruising speed of 110 miles an hour.

Diteman, father of two small children took up flying a year ago. According to his wife in Billings, he had planned his flight since summer. In August he won a license from the U. S. commerce department to fly his plane alone but not to carry passengers. He said in his application that he had flown a total of 70 hours.

Seeks Records

The stockman, nearly six feet tall and weighing only about 160 pounds, brought his plane here from Montana Oct. 9. No one expected him. He said he came to search through Newfoundland records for proof that he was descended from Drake, the British admiral who circled the globe in 1580.

Diteman christened his plane "The Golden Hind"—the name of Drake's historic flagship. He made several flights over St. Johns, both inland and seaward, and then proceeded to Harbor Grace. There he prepared quietly and unassumingly for his flight.

Just before leaving he left a sealed letter with a person he trusted.

The message he left said:

Bound For London

"I am bound for London. You will find a package and two letters in my hotel room. Forward same as addressed. Be sure to wrap the bundle in heavy paper. Hold the tools a few days for cable instructions, otherwise send to same address. I have 165 U. S. standard gallons of gasoline, at a conservative estimate enough for 25 hours.

'Many thanks, Newfoundlanders, for your kindness, and apologies for my impromptu lies about Drake. He did not bring me here nor to London, albeit I am his descendant. You will hear from me.

"Diteman."

Plans Secret

Diteman, it was revealed, had stopped twice within the last month at Roosevelt Field, L. I., general starting point for trans-Atlantic flights, but gave no intimation of his plan to fly to London. He told H. I. Crow, field manager of Air Associates, Inc., to whom he took the low-wing Barling for repairs, that he expected to fly to South America and become export representative of the Barling company.

Corw described the plane as having a single 100-horsepower motor. The monoplane was 21 feet, 11 inches long, 6 feet, 10 inches high and had a span of 32 feet 9 inches .It weighed 1373 pounds when fully loaded. I twas equipped with special gas tanks with 120 gallon capacity.

"The Golden Hind" was painted black and orange with the figures HX-881-H on the wing.

WIFE CONFIDENT OF FLIER'S SUCCESS

BILLINGS, MONT., Oct. 22—(U.P.)—Mrs. U. F. Diteman, whose 31-year old husband took off alone today fom New Foundland in a small plane for England, said tonight she was "absolutely positive" he would span the Atlantic.

Diteman, a Billings cattleman and the father of two children, has been flying only about a year, his wife said. He began preparations for the Atlantic flight last summer, she said, and flew alone to New Foundland last month where final prepaations were made secetly.

Careful Flier

"I am absolutely positive he will make it," she said. "He is a careful man, takes no chances and made all preparations weeks in advance. He is flying alone and he will get through successfully, I know.

"He decided to take the trip this summer. I cannot tell you why he is doing it, but he is sure and I am sure he will get through all right. His plane is an ideal machine for the trip, carries ample gasoline and is sturdy enough fo any ocean storm he might meet."

Special Gas Tank

Diteman's plane is a Barling NB-3, low winged monoplane powered by a 110 horsepower Warren Scarab motor, Mrs. Diteman said.

Her husband occupied one cockpit, while the other was used for a special gasoline tank. Additional tanks containing 15 gallons each were installed on each wing.

"My husband hoped to use only six gallons of gasoline an hour," she said. "He told me he would fly at less than half speed."

FLIGHT DECLARED DANGEROUS VENTURE

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I. Oct. 22—(U.P.)—U. F. Diteman's flight across the Atlantic will prove a very dangerous venture, according to Charles Ellsworth, weather expert at Roosevelt field.

Flying from Newfoundland toward London today, the Montana cattleman should encounter a stiff northeast gale on part of his route, Ellsworth said.

Ellsworth revealed that when Diteman was at Roosevelt field some time ago he had difficulty in dissuading him from hopping off for Boston in a stiff storm.

PLANE MAKERS EXPRESS SURPRISE

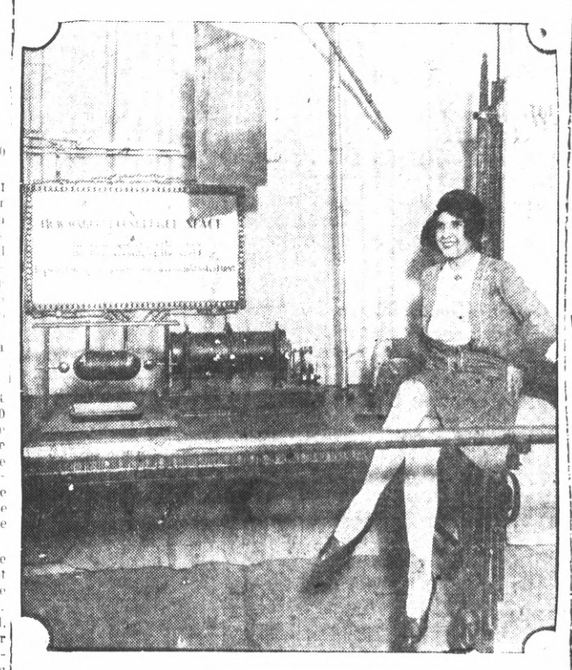

MARSHALL, Mont., Oct. 22—(U.P.)—Amazed glances passed between officials of the Nicholas-Beazley airplane plant here today when they were told U. F. Diteman had left Newfoundland in a Barling plane, bound for London.

"He is gambling on a stock plane and a 110 horsepower motor," one of the officials said. The Barling was manufactured at the factory here.

The craft, not designed for a trans-Atlantic flight, was used recently by Barney Zimmerley in a speed record flight of 1,650 miles from Brownsville, Tex., to Winnepeg, Manitoba. Zimmerley made the distance in 16 hours.

First Snow Hits East

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 22—(UP)—Rockford experienced its first snowstorm of the season when an all-day grizzling rain turned into a blinding snowstorm late this afternoon.

Down town streets were covered with slush that tied supper hour traffic into snarls, resulting in many minor accidents. In outlying districts the snow fall reached a depth of over half an inch with snow still falling at 7 o'clock. Today's storm is one of the earliest on record here.

Protect Your Furniture

A $1.25 to Rid Your Home of Moths May Save You Hundreds of Dollars.

MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

THEATRE MAN ACCUSES DANCER

secluded little consultation room to talk about booking her act, tried to make love to her and then consummated an assault, listened to an entirely different story today.

Story Unshaken

On cross examination District Attorney Buron Fitts failed to shake the showman's story materially.

"Did you think you were framed?" Fitts asked.

"Did I think so?" Pantages almost gasped. "I knew it."

The Pringle act, "The Prince From Hollywood" was read into the record and Pantages pointed out the parts he believed suggestive. He was questioned on every angle of his story, but refused to change it in any way. At the close of the session he was under re-direct examination by Gilbert and will resume Wednesday.

Reluctant Interview

Pantages declared that he did not suggest a conference on last August 9, the day on which the girl ran screaming from the room, but that she had followed him about the theater building until he reluctantly granted her an interview.

Then he described how they had entered the little room and said that Solita Deyo—almost always he referred to Miss Pringle by her stage name—had disheveled his clothtes and that he had pushed her out of the room.

Act Held Suggestive

"It was in May that I gave her act a tryout," Pantages began his testimony. "But I told her that we could not use it because it was too suggestive.

"She came back several times, four or five at night and the same number in the day time, but I told her my decision was final."

Then he referred to the events of August 9, testifying that he first saw Miss Pringle seated in the reception room of his main office.

"I saw her there and she said: 'How do you do?' I answered: 'Oh, hello.'" He shrugged to show how it had been done.

To Barber Shop

"When I came out of my office again to go to the barber shop, she said 'I want to see you, Mr. Pantages.' I told her that the barber had telephoned for my appointment and said:

"I can't see anyone on business stoday, but come along and I'll put you in the show."

"She came right along with me. I took her in through the balcony exit, pointed to the seats and told her to take one. I don't know wwhat one she took. I did not tell her that I would come back. Then I went to the barber shop.

"I was there about 20 minutes. When I returned I went up to the main office of the theater. There were a lot of people waiting to see me, but what I was looking for was some employe or hanger-on that I could tell to get a motion picture film that night and send it to our San Francisco theater.

Went to Balcony

"There was no one there. So I went down to the balcony exit. Sometimes some employe stands inside the door watching the show and I thought I could find someone there to tell to do the errand, but there was no one. I didn't notice where Solita Deyo was.

"As I went down the stairs toward the publicity office, someone behind me spoke. She said: 'I want to see you, Mr. Pantages, on important business.' I told her that I couldn't see anyone as I was in a hurry to get home and asked if some other time would not do.

Girl Insistent

"No. I must see you now," she answered, so I told her to go back up to the office and I would be there in a minute. She said she wanted to see me privately so she wouldn't be disturbed. The publicity office door was locked, but the conference room was open.

"I said 'come on' and we went into the conference room. She removed her coat and hat and put it on a chair. I had taken my coat off coming down the stairs and placed it in my lap."

Pantages said the door was open about a foot. He testified that he told Miss Pringle to "go ahead and tell me your important business but nothing about that act." He said the girl looked nervous and excited and hesitated about answering.

Pair Scuffle

"I said again to tell me what she wanted. the showman continued. "She grabbed my tie and told me I knew what she wanted. I raised up in my seat and she raised up too. Then she reached over and slammed the door. We scuffled and she disarranged my clothing. I managed to get the door open and get behind her to push her out of the room."

At this point Pantages left the witness stand and, using a door to illustrate ,wrestled about showing how the girl had clung to it before he finally pushed her into the hall. He said she was screaming.

"I was as polite as I could, but I got her out into the hall. I don't know where I touched her .Then I went back into the room and fixed my clothes. I don't know where she went; I went upstairs."

Denies Coaching

Pantages denied that he had bitten the girls that he had torn her clothing or caressed her. He testified also that he had not told Tillie Russo, William Jobelman or Roy Keene, theater employes, to go to the district attorney's office and make false statements.

Pantages declared that he told Jay Sheridan, called by the state, tha the did not want his testimony that a girl named "Skids" Pringle had stayed overnight with him. The state charged that Pantages wanted Sheridan to perjure himself.

The multi-millionaire referred to a talk with two men in the little conference room a few hours before he and Miss Pringle went there, bringing the matter in to establish regular use of the room for business.

Rodney Pantages preceded his father on the stand and testified that Sheridan had threatened to go to the district attorneys office if he was not paid money and that he had been told to do it if he liked.
